

MILLION HORSE MARCH—CHILDREN'S LETTER WRITING CAMPAIGN TO END HORSE SLAUGHTER

March 27, 2012

We are asking for children through out the United States to write letters to Congress and to the President to tell them just what horses mean to them and how important it is to protect our American horses from cruel and inhumane slaughter for human consumption. These letters will be sent to one location and then will be delivered to congress on March 27, 2012 in one giant delivery. Children from age 4 to 18 may submit drawings, letters, poems, in their own words. Horses play an important role in our children's lives now, teaching responsibility, confidence and are used as a form of therapy with great success.

Schools can incorporate this process as a civics lesson on how the government works and how we the people have a civic duty to work within the confines of the law to affect positive change. The connection can be made between historical events that brought great sweeping changes in our country to right a wrong, i.e.: slavery, the suffragette movement, the Vietnam War, etc.
