

MILLION HORSE MARCH—CHILDREN'S LETTER WRITING CAMPAIGN TO END HORSE SLAUGHTER

March 27, 2012

The United States and Canada are once again joining forces to bring about positive change in our two countries!

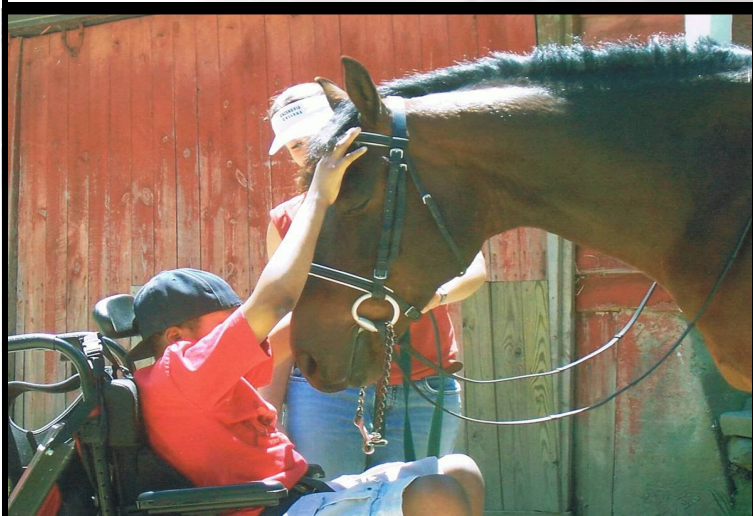

We are asking for children across Canada to write letters to their Members of Parliament and to the Prime Minister to tell them just what horses mean to them and how important it is to protect our Canadian horses from cruel and inhumane slaughter for human and animal consumption. These letters will be sent to one location and then will be delivered to the Parliament buildings in Ottawa, ON, Canada on March 27, 2012, in one giant delivery.

Children from age 1 to 18 may submit drawings, letters, and poems, describing in their own words and with their own images, what horses mean to them. These children do not have to ride or own a horse to participate – they just have to love horses.

Schools can incorporate this process as a social studies unit/lesson on how the government works and how we the people have a civic duty to work within the confines of the law to affect positive change. Connections can be made between historical events and movements that brought great sweeping changes in our world to right a wrong – in the tradition of Martin Luther King Jr. in the United States and the Suffrage Movement here in Canada.

Please participate! Encourage your children to become a part of history! Join the cooperative effort between the United States and Canada to bring an end to horse slaughter!
